What do machinists do?

Machinists use machine tools, such as lathes, milling machines and grinders, to produce precision metal parts. Although they may produce large quantities of one part, precision machinists often produce small runs of one-of-a-kind items. They use their knowledge of the working properties of metals and their skill with machine tools to plan and carry out the operations needed to make machined products that meet precise specifications. The parts that machinists make range from bolts to automobile pistons.

Some machinists often called production machinists may produce large quantities of one part, especially parts requiring the use of complex operations and great precision. Many modern machine tools are computer numerically controlled (CNC). CNC machines, following a computer program, control the cutting tool speed, change dull tools, and perform all necessary cuts to create a part.
