PART B. Read the text and answer the following questions in your answer sheet:

Safety in Nurseries: A Growing Concern

New information shows that more accidents are happening in nurseries in England. This is a reminder that the government must check these places carefully. The plan to give more free nursery places to families is good news. The first new nurseries will open in the north and Midlands. This is a good decision by Bridget Phillipson, the education minister.

Good nurseries help children learn. This is very important, especially now that more children are starting school without knowing how to eat or use the toilet by themselves. At the moment, not all children can go to a nursery. Some nurseries cost too much money. The government will open 4,000 new nursery places in poor areas by September. This should help more children get a good start.

Most nurseries are safe. In fact, 97% were rated good or excellent by inspectors. Also, free nursery places help parents, especially mothers, go to work. This helps families earn more money. For this reason, many people say early years education is also important for women's rights.

But safety must always come first. One baby, Genevieve Meehan, died at a nursery in 2022. The nursery had a good safety rating at the time, so people are asking questions. An investigation is now happening. Other reports show more problems in nurseries, and some people say staff are working even when they are sick. These problems must be looked at closely.

Ms Phillipson is right to invest in nurseries and talk about Sure Start – a good programme from a past Labour government. But she must also tell people that many nursery places today are run by businesses. The biggest one, Kids Planet, gets money from private companies. At the same time, smaller nursery groups and childminders (who often work alone) are closing.

Nurseries should be safe and not too expensive. They are very important for children and families. But nurseries are checked less often than schools – only every six years. This is not right. Small children need more care and attention. Also, new changes to the number of staff per child have made things harder in some nurseries.

It is difficult to keep nurseries cheap and high-quality at the same time. But this is what we need. Ms Phillipson's plan is a good first step, but there is still a lot of work to do.

Subject: Questions About Emma's Progress and Daily Routine

Dear Ms. Johnson,

I hope you are doing well. I am the father of Emma (from the Yellow Group). She really enjoys coming to kindergarten every day, and we are happy she feels safe and happy in your class.

I would like to ask a few things about her daily routine. Sometimes, when I ask her what she did at school, she doesn't say much. I understand she is still very young, but I want to know more about how she spends her day.

What time do they usually go outside to play? Does she eat all her lunch? I am a bit worried because sometimes she comes home very hungry.

Also, could you tell me how Emma is doing with her speaking and drawing? At home, she likes to look at books and draw animals. I wonder if she does the same at school.

Please let me know if there is anything we need to bring for next week, like extra clothes or materials for art activities.

Thank you for all your help and care. We really appreciate the work you do for the children.

Best regards,

Daniel White
